ABOUT THE AREA

Alamance Community College is part of the statewide network of community colleges providing training and retraining for local residents to meet needs of both existing and new employers. The mission of Alamance Community College is to provide an open door to high quality education and learning. Central to this mission is the belief in the unique worth of each person. Accordingly, the College is relevant and responsive to the needs of the local, state, and global communities.

Alamance County is located in the heart of America's best business state, a dynamic destination that is coming into its own. Alamance County is an emerging “corridor” of commerce where two major Interstates 85 (north/south) and 40 (east/west) link two of the fastest growing and most talked-about metro areas on the East Coast. At one end is the Research Triangle Park region of Raleigh, Durham, and Chapel Hill; at the other end, the Piedmont Triad region of Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point. Alamance County is the centerpiece of this Carolina Corridor, where the full resources of the region come together to create exceptional opportunities for expanding and relocating companies.

Alamance Community College offers a wide range of educational and vocational training programs to more than 18,000 students annually.
